Edythe Trapnell has been chosen one of the 40 college students in the United States for summer service in New York June 25-August 30. She was given a $150 scholarship for this work. She will live and work in the Union Settlement House.

This is the 27th summer that the National Intercollegiate Christian Council has sponsored this work for those students who are willing to give their services for the underprivileged of New York City. Edythe will work 30 hours a week with students in the settlement house. Every week she will spend the afternoons and evenings of two days with the remaining group of students. They will discuss their work, listen to speakers and will spend some of this time in visiting certain labor and political groups. Every Saturday and Sunday, tours will be conducted to different places of interest around New York City.

WHO'S WHO

Taylor, Slappey, Stubbs, Warnock
Featured On Series This Week

By KATHERINE FOSTER AND EVELYN POPE

REBECCA TAYLOR

Rebecca Taylor hails from Fort Valley. She is the oldest of three sisters, the others being 17 and three.

Bec, as her friends call her, has been a member of Honor Board since it was organized three years ago. During her junior year, she held the positions of president of Bell Hall, a member of General Rec Board, and secretary of the Granddaughters' Club. She is now vice-president of CGA.

Bec is one of those well-rounded persons who takes an active part in extra-curricula activities but still finds time to make Phoenix. Her favorite sports are swimming and dancing, and she says she wishes that she could play tennis, but that she made her lowest mark in college on a tennis court. She is completing majors in English and French.

Among her dislikes, Rebecca lists gaining weight. She says that she loves to eat and likes most everything but okra and liver. Reading poetry and playing the piano occupy a large portion of her time. It appears that she adores brown eyes and that her chief interest at present lies in Denver, Colo.

In the opinion of her roommate, Bec "has a charming personality," "always knows the right thing to say," "is full of wit," and "lots of fun." She also added, "Bec is a wonderful roommate and her only fault is popping chewing gum."

All in all, Rebecca is a well-rounded, versatile student, who seems predestined to always get along well with people and make friends easily.

Air Raid Shelter
Models Made
By Art Students

Miss Lydia Bancroft's classes in art 324 and art 400, in order to help cope with any emergency which may arise under war conditions, have developed a project on how to make an air raid shelter not only safe and comfortable, but artistic as well.

The girls in these classes have made scale models of rooms and windows which could be blacked out at a moment's notice. The draperies and shades at the windows are made of non-inflammable material. The furniture in the rooms is plain and easily cleaned. Cabinets for food, water, books, and other articles which might be useful have been designed and built to scale. Drawings and plans of other ideas have been made. The class has assimilated a file of books and magazine articles which contain useful ideas for the furnishings and decorating of air raid shelters.

The project has been placed on exhibit in the War Information room in the GSCW library and is open to the public.

AUGUSTA SLAPPEY

A blonde with blue eyes is Augusta Slappey, Who's Who member. Her friends describe her as "mighty cute," and "the life of every party."

A native of Bainbridge, Slappey is now working there for the federal government. She completed her work at GSCW at the end of winter quarter, and will graduate in June. She majored in secretarial science.

Well-known and well-liked on the campus, Slappey is known all over the state for her work in the Methodist student organizations. She was active in this work on the campus and held a major office in the state organization.

She was also active in the Y and Recreation Association. Among her activities have been Freshman Y Cabinet, Aeolian Guild singers and Granddaughters Club.

Slappey is the older of two girls. Hannah, her sister, is now a sophomore at GSCW.

Slappey's roommate says of her that she is a "perfectly natural person," "very nice," "lots of fun," and "easy to know and get along with."

She is the kind of person who gets along well with everyone. She has a swell personality and a good sense of humor. With these qualities, she should go a long way down the road of success.

ANN STUBBS

Forecast into the future, 1950—Except from the Atlanta Journal, "Senorita Ann Stubbs has returned home for a short visit. Miss Stubbs has a position as English translator for the Brazilian government. She is now located in Rio de Janeiro."

Tall, dark and attractive, Ann has a desire to live in South America.

One of those enviable "finish in three years" students, Ann has had a part in nearly all of the campus activities during her three years here. She was secretary of her class her freshman and sophomore years. She is on the YWCA cabinet. Ann has been a member of the Cecilia Singers since she has been at GSCW. She is a member of the Phoenix Society, the highest scholastic honor at GSCW.

Majoring in English and minoring in Spanish, Ann wants to be a Spanish translator when she graduates.

Photography, swimming, and dancing are her pet hobbies, and spinach is her pet hate.

DORIS WARNOCK

Have you seen a graceful gal with gorgeous green eyes around the campus? That's Doris Warnock. She was president of our Rec. Association for this year, and also president of the Tennis Club. Her majors are physical education and history, and her minor is biology. Among other things, Doris was a council member of the Georgia Athletic Federation of College Women.

A La Mode

By BLANCHE LAYTON

In light pastel shades and bright ones, the students on the campus have blossomed forth this week. Virginia Lansford was seen going to class in a yellow shantung dress, which has buttons down the front and has a rounded neckline as its chief features.

Ethel Hembree looked cool in her blue chambray dress with its fitted waist band of striped chambray.

Blue and white seersucker went into the skirt that Ruth Perman wore with her white batiste, lace-trimmed blouse.

Hazel Holloman fought the heat wearing a white eyelet dress. Its high-lights were a fitted bodice with a square neck and a full skirt.

It seems that there is a cunning history behind the name of Miss Hallie's patchwork jacket.

As usual, Mary Jean Everett looked neat in a dress of navy blue crepe made with a white pique collar that has a ruffle around it.

Jo Anne Bivins was seen wearing a Georgia blue sailor. It was trimmed with two rows of white tape.

Ivie Lee Smith To Head Chemistry Club

Ivie Lee Smith was elected president of the GSCW Chemistry club at the final meeting of the year last Monday. After the meeting the new officers met with the old ones to discuss plans for next year.

KEY CENTER WORK

CIVILIAN MORALE, INFORMATION AND TRAINING EFFORTS PROGRESS

The work of the organization of Civilian Morale, Information and Training sponsored by the Federal Bureau of Education in the universities and colleges of the land, is well under way in the Service Area of GSCW—one of the three designated key centers within the state. Emory University and the University of Georgia are the other two.

Eleven of the coordinating colleges within the area have each undertaken the work within its tentatively allotted area, designated its director, begun its War Information Center, and appointed a group to serve as a Committee of Morale and Information, so that they will be ready to launch the work immediately after the opening of school next September.

The Morale Committee at the Georgia Woman's College at Valdosta, under its director, Dr. H. P. Punks, is sponsoring radio programs over the Valdosta radio station every two weeks. WMAZ has promised 15 minutes weekly for such programs to be directed by the colleges in middle Georgia, GSCW, Mercer, Bessie Tift, and GMC. Plans are being made to start these soon. It is hoped also that the station at Cordele may be used.

On GSCW campus, the local committee has been active fostering the movement, each member of the group doing his bit. The War Information Center located in the Georgia room in the library, under the direction of Miss Betty Ferguson, has assembled a vast amount of material now on display and at the disposal of faculty members, students, and the public.

The Students' Training Institute with Miss Tommie Maxwell as chairman has begun to function; student speakers having appeared before the Rotary and the Kiwanis clubs during the past week. Mrs. Max Noah has been contacting local organizations to arrange for such student speakers on some of their programs for next year. George Haslam handles the publicity, and Dr. Eura Belle Bolton is the alumnae representative.

THE WORLD THIS WEEK

(This column is sponsored and written weekly by members of the International Relations Club.)

In Washington the officials are busy trying to do something about the wave of optimism which swept over our country last week as a result of over encouraging news from the Army-Navy review and the press.

Impressive ceremonies which the President held for Brig. Gen. James Doolittle, leader of the air raid on Japan, greatly stimulated the confidence of the American people.

In fact, as a nation we are now becoming entirely too optimistic over this country's war efforts. Officials who realize the war status of our country are alarmed for fear that the people might be building up to an awful let-down.

The President in his press conference last Friday again warned the public of the struggle ahead and the sacrifices still to be made. He also requested that the American press do more than it has to make the victories of the American forces seem what they really are instead of being greatly exaggerated.

No Explanation
What the President did not explain was how the press was to do all of this under the present publicity policy. What the press now learns about war news comes from its own reports from war areas which have been officially cen-

Schoyer Relates Thrilling Story Of Chinese People And Their Customs

By NINA WILEY

The present war is showing the force and resource of China in manpower and patience in a way never before recognized in the west. "The Foreigners," by Preston Schoyer, is a thrilling and moving book, which goes deep into the heart of China and its quaint people, sometimes bringing forth disgust with their impractical customs and again evoking pity or laughter or respect for their ancient culture.

The foreigners are a group of missionaries, doctors, teachers, business men, and officials. They live for a time apart from the real China and its sufferings through their assumed superiority and legal extra territoriality. However, their position is entirely altered with the imminence of Japanese occupation of their city.

The foreigners are a group of missionaries, doctors, teachers, business men, and officials. They live for a time apart from the real China and its sufferings through their assumed superiority and legal extra territoriality. However, their position is entirely altered with the imminence of Japanese occupation of their city.

Their difference from the masses affords no protection in the air raids and they suffer with the common people. These circumstances break down the wall between the two groups and revolutionize the feeling of the foreigners toward the Chinese.

Schoyer has created real, breathing characters to tell his story of China. He is able to portray subtle differences in temperament and outlook. Against the background of China and the war, he weaves a human adventure, colored by the intimate love affair of Peter, a teacher in an American school for boys, and Meilan, a homeless Chinese girl who becomes a Red Cross nurse.

The story is further modified by the violence which follows the erection of a monument to a missionary martyr. Through the

With few exceptions, two girls will occupy the three-girl rooms unless the September enrollment is larger than is anticipated.

Thursday, present occupants who desired, and were eligible, reserved their same rooms, and seniors-to-be signed up for rooms in Sanford. Students were allowed to reserve rooms in their same dormitories yesterday. According to the new classification, other students reserved their new rooms this morning.

The west wing of Sanford was to be reserved for home economics majors because of their continuous moving in and out to apprenticeship teaching centers and home management houses. This proposed system did not materialize because many students had made other plans for rooms and room-mates before they received information concerning this scheme. However, this plan will very likely be introduced next year, Miss Ethel Adams has announced.

The result is that except for a little headlining the government puts out the war news.

True statements of facts about the war will never be obtained until the government allows the press to balance good news with equally bad news. Thus it seems that the press cannot be held responsible for such waves of rejoicing as swept over our country last week.

So determined has the Axis been to destroy our shipping and trade with Latin American countries that they have not hesitated to sink Latin American ships and so run the risk of becoming involved in conflict with these countries which it would prefer to avoid.

On the brighter side of the picture is the new plan advocated by Lewis W. Douglas for making better use of the shipping tonnage we now have. This plan calls for doing away with all non-essential cargoes, such as fruit, sugar, and coffee; and requiring that all ships start back with essential 500 tons of war supplies and pick up en route only those supplies essential to this country's war effort.

This would necessitate a new financial method of repairing the damage done to Latin American producers but the money would be well spent.

Reservations For Next Year Made

Room reservations for next year are being made this week, Thursday through today. The major change in housing will be separate dormitories for sophomores and juniors.

Present plans are for sophomores to occupy Atkinson, Beeson, and Bell; and for juniors to occupy Ennis Mansion, and Mayfair. Such reservations are subject to change if the fall quarter enrollment is inconsistent with this proposed set-up.

As formerly, seniors will be housed in Sanford and freshmen in Terrell Proper, A, B-C, and Bell Annex.

With few exceptions, two girls will occupy the three-girl rooms unless the September enrollment is larger than is anticipated.

SPORTS SPLASHES

By PEARL CULIFER

Congratulations to you seniors who have worked hard for four years to receive your degrees and who are now entering the professional world with wonderful opportunities awaiting you. I hope that during your four years at GSCW the Recreation Association has in some way helped to make your life more complete and well-rounded, has improved your physical being, and has given you such enjoyable experiences that you will never forget the fun you had.

Seniors, you have been a good class and the Recreation Association appreciates your cooperation in its activities throughout the four years. Of course, this past year the seniors did seem reluctant about entering the games and sports, but I have heard that practice teaching, home management, et cetera, interfered somewhat.

We remind you, seniors: "Don't forget to play" when you leave GSCW. If you are planning to teach school, remember there's nothing a child likes more than a teacher who plays herself, and who has the correct play attitude. And if you're planning to be someone's private secretary, you surely must choose some recreational activities and participate every day—or watch what I tell you: there is such a thing as "middle-age spread" coming early. In conclusion may I, in behalf of all of the underclassmen, wish every senior a most successful career in her chosen field.

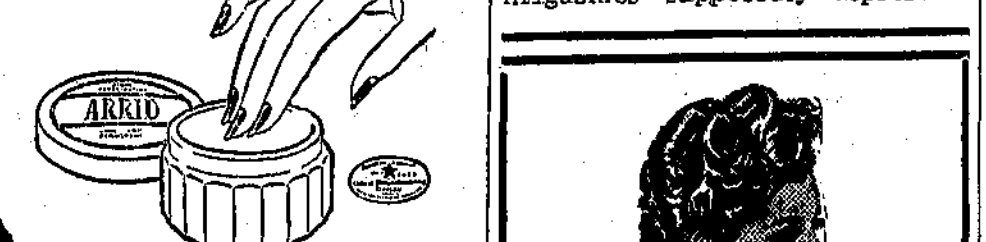

UNCLE SAM NEEDS YOU
This discussion brings us to our most important pastime—something which yesterday would have been considered a hobby, and which today is considered a necessity, both invigorating and pleasant. It has been brought about by that number one scarcity again, plus gasoline rationing. It's something that for the past decade society has tried to get away from and has practically succeeded; however, change! and it's all the fad! Have you guessed? It's walking.

Walking is an art which few people have realized. It possesses beauty, charm, and grace, which if one cares to develop will make her an outstanding character wherever she goes. Walk with your whole body—feel the graceful movement and coordination present. Walk in your best posture—and walk.

Let's do our bit for Uncle Sam this summer and this doesn't mean to stop playing, because of the rubber shortage—it means to keep ourselves physically fit. There is no substitute for play.

NOTATIONS
I must tell you about the place cards which created such a turmoil at Physical Ed club banquet. (No reflection on Glynise Smith.) The place cards were made from various clippings from magazines supposedly represent-

Faculty-Student Tournament Ends

The faculty-student tennis tournament is near its completion. The Doris Warnock-Larry Wynn combination has already reached its final bracket and is patiently waiting to challenge the winner of the semi-final game between Margaret Wilson-Bonnie McCay and Margaret Baldwin-Lloyd Outland. Watch the courts and bulletin boards for the announcement of the winners.

The tennis tournament got under way with Warnock-Wynn triumphing over Grace Bonner-Grace Potts. Then, Jane Reeve-Billy Jennings beat Ann Haddley-Cynthia Mallory. Also in the first round Margaret Wilson-McCay were victorious over Angela Gilson-Virginia Shoffield, and Baldwin-Outland over Lucy Nell Cunningham-Betty Lippman. In the next round, Warnock-Wynn defeated Reeve-Jennings.

FIVE RECEIVE LIFE SAVING AWARDS

Millie Mabbett, Olympia Diaz, Hannah Slappey, Lea Coddington, and Ann Bradford completed the standard American Red Cross senior life saving and water safety course last Wednesday. This course was conducted by Elizabeth Gay, who is a qualified Red Cross instructor. The class was tested by Miss Betty Lippman, also an instructor.

To qualify for the senior certificate, men and women are eligible who have passed their seventeenth birthday and are in ing something characteristic of the individual. Here goes:

Dr. Manchester found herself portrayed as one of the seven busy dwarfs, yet "Happy."

Miss Lippman is in a daze till yet as to the meaning of "Sissy Sweet", plus a sweet-looking man stuck on the card.

Mrs. Wooten was thrilled to death because she had received Oscar—the Lucky Strike of the year.

Miss Potts got homesick the moment she caught view of a ten-gallon hat and a cowboy.

We are still in the dark as to why Virginia Shoffield's card was covered with GOOFY.

But I bet I can guess the significance of the heart pierced with arrows on Miss McCay's card. What has Cupid been up to, on was it her archery classes?

Miss Louise Smith was met with a warning against smallpox. Nice thing to think about during a meal.

Jane Reeve's head swelled when she found herself pictured as "three in one—she's got it all."

Lanky Brown, what kind of a bottle was that on your card? There was a familiar label on it—could be I've seen it advertised in magazines.

Ann Haddley was puzzled over the combination of a tennis racket and the moon. She can't find time for both.

Peggy Jones found a catcher on her card—what's the score, Peggy?

Millie Mabbett discovered the only man in uniform. More power to you, Millie.

OUTING COURSE TO BE OFFERED

Next fall quarter a physical education course in outing activities will be added to the physical education program as course 100, for which freshmen and sophomores will receive regular credit. This course in outing activities will be an experimental course in the present national emergency. Because of the expansion in the camp movement and the establishment of camping areas by state and federal governments, this sort of experience and knowledge of outings is more significant.

The aim of the course will be: "To be at home in the out-of-doors." As to content, the course will concern itself with two main units:

1. Hiking and cycling, which will include such things as overnight hiking, packing, and sleeping out-of-doors, construction of shelter, trail blazing, and safety and health.

2. Out-door cooking, which will include fire building, learning kinds and use of firewood, menu planning, etc.

GSCW has two laboratories for these hikes and out-door eats, Nesbit woods and Lake Laurel. The enrollment in this course will be limited. All who are interested in taking outing activities next fall quarter, must notify the physical education department before June 5. Juniors and seniors may elect the course as non-credit.

Stick To It—Until You Finish College

Another academic year is nearing a close—another group of seniors are leaving GSCW to establish themselves in various fields of endeavor in scattered localities. This year—a year of war is a significant one, historically speaking. Some changes have been made in educational programs; some effects of the war have been felt. But as the war progresses, more changes will, of necessity, be made and more serious effects will be felt. College students and college graduates, allowed superior opportunities, are obligated more than ever to contribute superior services during this critical time.

Is college education worthwhile? Should I finish college or should I stop, start working at as large an income as I am likely to receive when I graduate? These are perplexing questions confronting some students at present.

The cost of living as a whole is rapidly increasing when, in many instances, income is not increasing. Perhaps it is necessary, certainly advisable, for some student to drop out because of this and other prevailing circumstances. Yet there are some remaining students, not confronted with such limitations, who are faced with the problem of making the decision of continuing or dropping out—the temptation of dropping out of college now appears very attractive. To these individuals, we advise serious consideration of advantages vs. disadvantages.

We aren't upholding the outdated idea that "education is preparation for life." But if available college opportunities are advantageously taken by college students, the results are not only contributing to each student's present period of life, but are also forming a firm background on which the future may be based.

Now as so many boys and girls are grabbing the quickest possible training programs required to hold certain jobs, competition among them may not be felt so acutely. As the years pass by, the situation is likely to grow more serious and a broader, deeper educational background will be a distinct advantage.

We urge that students of college—material and other favorable circumstances finish their regular college work if possible because the numerous benefits will be reaped not only now, but especially later. Call it patriotism if you like—it is a great contribution to national defense and offense.

WIT'S END---

By JEWELL WILLIE

Colds are a habit, in fact there're so habitual as to be known as common colds. They're caused by a non-filterable virus which hasn't the grace to be identified but which never fails to make its presence known.

Because we can't identify Virus Bacillus—alias the Invisible Germ—we must treat the symptom rather than the cause. We must endure the whoop. We must allow watery eyes to erode little furrows down our cheeks. We must adopt as our theme song, "My Wide Irish Nose"—the reddest nose that blows! sniff-niff, sneeze, sneeze, sneeze, sniff, sniff, sneeze, sneeze, sneeze, sneeze—my wide Irish nose!"

After so long we can stand it no longer. We pull our Glucometa, Methol, and cough drops. We stretch out on the bed and drop. We've heard that rest is a wonderful remedy. Therefore, we close our eyes so tightly that our nose wrinkles and resolve to sleep if it kills us. But tears continue to flow and the pillow becomes uncomfortably damp.

Finally, we decide to go to the hospital. We stumble over, gasping for breath at every step. We plead guilty to the charge of harboring the Invisible Germ and are thrown into white innerspring dungeon, without fail.

Then our gaoler enters with a terrifying tray—from it she doles out one white pill, one yellow pill, half an ounce of a substance which resembles, in taste, somewhat spoiled imitation extract of orange, and six drops in either side of our Irish nose. "Sure, an' a fine help it is, too."

At last we can sleep in peace. We drop off as quickly and as easily as an infant. We are in the middle of a wonderful dream when our gaoler re-enters and shakes our pillow ever so slightly. "Here's something to help you sleep," she says sweetly. While we slowly count to ten backwards, she pulls all the cracks out of the walls of our dungeon—thus making us quite helpless and walks out closing our door behind her—

Cah-choooooo!

GADABOUT---

By BLANCHE LAYTON

Judy Krauss is being married today to Jim Corbett.

Julia Abrams insists that she is not artificial when reading in oral interpretation.

I suppose all of you have seen Lib Eavenson's green Cadillac.

You should have seen Rosemary Ewing teaching Mr. Noah how to jitterbug at the "Pirates of Penzance" reception in Ennis Recreation hall.

If you missed the operetta Wednesday night, you have no idea how much you missed. Mr. Luecker was a scream in his night gown!

This Affair

This affair with Janis Dunbar and a certain Bivins lad is a thing of note.

Maurice Lane and Johnny Rose have had a marvelous week sans classes, without restrictions, and avec les girl friends. They're going to miss those Sanford benches, so help me!

A young fellow from New Hampshire sees Inez McGill just too, too often.

Don't ask Rosie Ewing, Margaret Overton, and Lib Cordell what kind of time they had Tuesday.

Winifred Greene sure was smiling Wednesday afternoon.

Cita Brewton had lots of fun this week with Klyph Kruse from the University of Dubuque.

I'd Like Most

As the school year draws to an end and our seniors are getting ready to leave Sanford hall, there comes to my mind the many things I'd like most to have from members of the senior class:

Nelle Bond's teeth
Doris Dunn's figure
Virginia Bankston's hands
Blanche Muldrow's brains
Margaret Overton's brunette hair
Grace Smith's lips
Violet Farley's eyes
Jo Ann Bivins' ability at the piano
Eloise Hightower's ability at dancing with Johnnie Rose
Ruth Adams' dynamic personality
Grace Sassar's sweet disposition
Faye Johnson's philosophy of life
Winnie Stoke's complexion
Sue Herring's posture
Audrey Jenkins' legs
